Dear Dick:

To amplify our recent telephone conversation, after discussing your letter with various Agency colleagues, I find that there are several offices interested in seeing your complete report, or at least detailed examples showing how your factor analysis method actually works. If you would forward one or two copies of the report to me, I will take care of distributing it internally to the proper parties.

In addition to this Agency, it is possible that either the Office of the Secretary of Defense (OSD) or the Institute for Defense Analysis (IDA) might be interested in your methodological approach. You might also want to take steps to ensure that your report is included in the information processing system operated by the Defense Documentation Center. It would then receive maximum distribution throughout the federal establishment and perhaps come to the attention of other parties potentially interested in your factor analysis technique.

In any event, I thank you for writing and look forward to seeing how your interesting approach actually works.

Sincerely yours,

George A. Carver, Jr.
